Location

Copenhagen, Danish National Archives (RA), Lensregnskaber, Kalundborg B: Jordebog 1602. Endorsement (17th cent.) fol. 1 verso on the upper part of the left margin: "Jordbogen thill Kallundborg Slot for Anno 1602".

Description

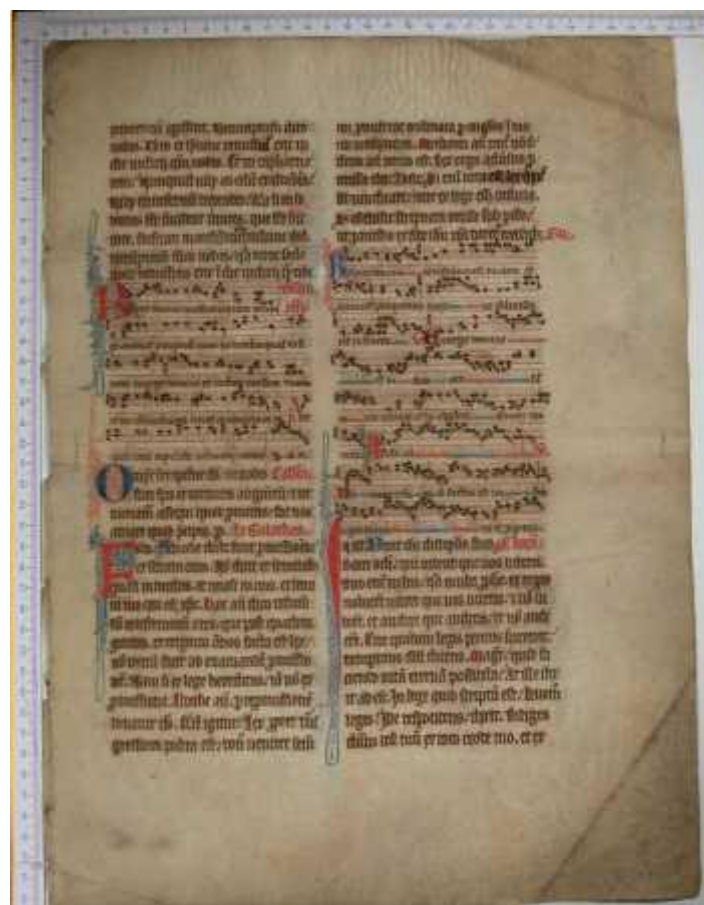

RA 4613 consists of a single folio measuring 415 x 292 mm. Parchment. Ruled space 305 x 215 mm. 15th cent. 2 columns, 34 lines to the column. Coloured initials in blue and red. Music notation on 4 red lines (square notation).

The fragment contains the texts for Mass on the 13th Sunday after Trinity as well as the Lessons and Gospels for Masses on Wednesday and Friday in the following week.

Liturgical Context

The texts for the 13th Sunday after Trinity follow the Roman liturgical tradition having Ps. 89,1 as verse to the Alleluia, where all Danish sources have Ps 94,1-2. RA 4613 deviates from the Roman tradition by having Lk 10,23-27 as the Gospel (which the Roman tradition has on Dominica XII). In this regard, as well as that of the Lesson (2 Cor 5,1-11) and the Gospel (Mt 12,14-21) on Feria IV, it concords with the Danish tradition as known in the printed Danish missals from Lund, Copenhagen, Viborg, Slesvig and Ribe (RA 5779).

As far as the music is concerned the Introit Respice domine begins with an upward interval of a 4th (known interalia in the Salisbury tradition), whereas in the Roman tradition it normally begins with an upward interval of a 5th. Though essentially that of the standard modern Roman rite, the music of all the parts of the missa proprium as found in this fragment differ in numerous details from the version in the Liber Usualis.

[Feria IV (Wednesday in the 12th week after

Offertorium

By the time this manuscript (RA 4613) was copied, the Verse or Verses which originally accompanied the Offertory Antiphon (or Respond, as some prefer to call it) had been abandoned and only the Antiphon remains.

It is in mode 2
